Throughout his great professional basketball career, the Royals' new coach, Bob Cousy, had the knack of rising to the occasion at the most opportune time. In the 1954 All-Star Game at old Madison Square Garden, his miscue forced the game into overtime, but then he rose from goat to hero through some brilliant playing in the extra period. When his East team pulled out the victory, he emerged with the Most Valuable Player honors — after another player had already "won" that trophy in earlier voting by the writers.

The Cincinnati Royals' top man, Max Jacobs had this in mind and at first contact, Cousy admitted that he wanted to sit it out for a year or so and "just relax."

But the persistent Jacobs wouldn't give up and eventually Cousy wore down. "The withdrawal pains were getting to me," said the former Boston Celtics star. "Now I know how Vince Lombardi must've felt. It's really tough to leave something that's been your whole life."

On May 9, 1969, the Royals held a press conference at the Cincinnati Club and named Cousy as new head coach of the ball club, replacing Ed Jucker who had one season remaining on a three-year pact.

In making the announcement to the press, Jacobs said of Cousy, "He was one of the greatest players and one of the greatest gentlemen on and off the court. He became one of the best college coaches — but most important, I have found in talking to him that he is a man who is not impressed with his own greatness — a quality so rare as to be almost unbelievable. He will be a great addition to the Cincinnati sports scene, and will do a great job in leading the Royals."

Cousy, who turned 41 this past August, was an outstanding guard in the National Basketball Association for 13 seasons following graduation from Holy Cross in 1950. He led the Celtics to the prominence they still enjoy today. He is still considered the best "little man" to ever play the game.

Following retirement after the 1962-63 season, he became a television network (ABC) commentator for two years on the NBA Game-of-The-Week series.

For the past six years, the former New York City native has coached the Boston College Eagles to five post-season tournament appearances and an overall 117-34 (.775) record. His 1968-69 squad placed second behind Temple in the National Invitation Tournament. While at Boston College, Cousy produced two All-American selections, John Austin (1967) and Terry Driscoll (1969).

On the night of March 13, at Cincinnati Gardens, Cousy was named to the Cincinnati Royals' first Hall-of-Fame by a vote of the hometown fans. He was the first athlete named to the "Opponents Section."

Cousy is synonymous with the game of professional basketball and has had many honors passed his way. In his 13 seasons as a player with the Celtics. Bob finished among the leaders in all major departments of play. Up to last season, his total assists mark of 6,949 stood at the top of the list. Ironically, the Royals' own Oscar Robertson finally topped Cousy's total during the last season's play.

His statistics for playoff games were equally impressive. Cousy holds other rare distinctions, such as being the only player named to the all-NBA team for 10 successive seasons (twice named to second five), and the only player to have participated in the first 13 All-Star games.

Bob Speck of the Los Angeles Citizen-News paid a tribute to the great playmaker of the Celtics when he wrote, "When Bob Cousy entered the NBA in 1950, the game was somewhere around the level of a traveling tent show. Cousy lent class, with a capital 'C'. He is never too busy to give the game which nurtured his fame a helping hand, via radio, TV, personal appearances, press interviews and the like."

Jimmy Cannon, the much-respected sports columnist of the New York Journal-American wrote of a particular game. "If Cousy never put the ball in the basket, he'd still be the most respected man in the league. At the finish, Boston had a one-point lead with 23 seconds to play. It was then that Bob proved his greatness. He held onto the ball dribbling it among the Knicks, scampering around them in a wild solo. He ran in a lunging crouch, his body bent to protect the ball from their hands, a thrilling dwarf among frustrated giants."

The year Cousy retired as an active player, he was honored and appropriately feted in his final visits to all the NBA cities. They had a day for him at Boston Gardens which just so happened to fall on St. Patrick's Day as well. The game was a sellout weeks ahead of time and is still referred to by Boston writers as the "Boston Tear Party."

On his day, Cousy received a telegram from President John F. Kennedy saying, "Your record is an eloquent testimonial to your abilities as a basketball player, and I will not attempt to improve upon it here. The game bears the indelible stamp of your rare skills and competitive daring, and it will serve as a living reminder of your long and illustrious career as long as it is played."

ROYALS' 1969-70 PROSPECTUS

FORMER PLAYMAKER - deluxe Bob Cousy, in a brand new role as the Royals' coach, hopes to get things moving quickly this 1969-70 NBA campaign. And, he'll have 11 tried-and-true veterans to help get the ball rolling.

Returning from last year's squad which split even in 82 games for Ed Jucker are super-stars Oscar Robertson and Jerry Lucas and a capable cast of characters like Tom Van Arsdale, Fred Hetzel, Al Tucker, Connie Dierking, Walt Wesley, Adrian Smith, Fred Foster, Bill Dinwiddie and Pat Frink.

All but Foster and Frink are veterans of two or more seasons in the rough-and-tough National Basketball Association.

New faces greeting coach Cousy this fall are rookies Herm Gilliam, Luther Rackley, Mel Coleman, Ed McCall and Ted Johnson. Gilliam, a speedy 6-3 playmaker from Purdue who played in the shadows of the great Rick Mount for the past two winters, appears to have the tools necessary to make a go of it in the professional ranks.

Rackley, no stranger to Cincinnati basketball fans, cavorted across town at Xavier University for four years and impressed a lot of people with his agility and sharp shooting touch. And, at 6-10, "Big Luke" could be the big man the Royals have forever been searching for.

Coleman, McCall and Johnson all played at smaller colleges but have lots of talent packed in between them. They should all get a good shot at winning jobs with the varsity.

COUSY'S MAIN concern is making the playoffs, something which the Royals have failed to do in the past two seasons under the now-departed Jucker. Even though the Royals finished with a 41-41 won-lost mark, good enough for a third-place spot in the western division, they wound up in fifth place in the tougher-than-ever eastern circuit, behind Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York, and Boston.

Cousy, who recorded a fine 117-34 record over six seasons at Boston College, says the Royals will run more than they ever have. "The whole secret in this game," says the ex-Celtic great, "is to get the ball off the board and get it down-court before the other team has a chance to convert from offense to defense. And I believe we have the two best guys to do that right now, namely Jerry (Lucas) grabbing the rebound and firing it out to best darned playmaker in the game of basketball, Oscar Robertson."

Robertson again topped the Royals in almost every statistical department last season. He averaged better than 24 points a game, was second to Lucas, shooting .486 from the floor and was among the NBA's top free throw tossers with an excellent .838 mark. In between all of that, he found time to average better than nine assists a game and again led the league in that department.

Lucas, although missing eight games because of illness and injury, still was up among the league's top rebounders with a better than 18 per game clip and had a great year, clicking on 55.1 percent of his floor shots to new club mark in that department.

Van Arsdale, the hustling towhead from Indiana, enjoyed his finest pro season ever, averaging 19 points a game teamed up in the backcourt with Robertson.

THINGS STARTED out great in '68 when the Royals jumped out to win their first three starts and by December 15, the team was near the top of the eastern division heap with a 20-9 record, aided by a six-game winning streak.

Then just as quickly as it had started out, the drive slowed down to a walk in mid-December with Lucas out of the lineup for four straight games with a bad touch of flu and a tender ankle.

Cousy will be counting on two fairly new faces on the Cincinnati scene, namely 6-8 forwards Fred Hetzel and Al Tucker. Both came to the club late in the season and were only played sparingly by Jucker. Tucker finished strong, hitting double figures in his last 11 games.

Cousy sums it all up by saying, "We may not win the championship or anything like that this year but I'll tell this — we're going to play exciting, hard-nosed basketball there with the playoffs as our immediate goal!"

And, you kinda' have to believe the guy.

Connie Dierking

CINCINNATI '58

24

Height: 6'10"
Weight: 235
Age: 33
Pos.: C

Followed up his finest pro season ever in the 1967-68 campaign by matching that mark almost identically. Large Conrad played in all 82 Royals' games last winter, scored 1335 points for a 16.3 points per game norm and was the club's second-best rebounder with 739 grabs.

Connie, who still holds the University of Cincinnati bounding mark for one game (33), has now put in four seasons with the Royals since playing as a journeyman center for Syracuse, Philadelphia and San Francisco plus a stint in the defunct ABL. Has a great hook shot both form and percentage-wise.

Actually gets on himself when he misses one. Shot .443 from the floor last year and was tough from the foul line with a .762 mark. Led the Royals last winter in most times disqualified on personal fouls (9).

Connie, a native of Valley Stream, Long Island, but a transplanted Cincinnati since his early days at UC, is usually at his best against the better NBA pivotmen as his record will attest. Last season, he averaged 20.1 points a game against Bill Russell and the world champion Boston Celtics.

Usually has his better games against Wilt Chamberlain. Came to the Royals back in 1965 with Art Heyman from San Francisco in exchange for old pal, Bud Olsen. An avid golfer, Connie is general manager of the Losantville Lanes, a deluxe bowling establishment in the Cincinnati suburb of Golf Manor where he lives year-round with wife Sue and four daughters, Jane, Cammy, Joey and little Suzi.

Bill Dinwiddie

HIGHLANDS U. '64

Height: 6'7"

Weight: 220

Age: 26

Pos.: F

"Diamond Bill", as he's called by his locker-room buddies because of his snazzy wardrobe, could be a very solid candidate for a starting berth in the corner this year. He now has two years of pro ball under his belt, both with the Royals, and he should be a better player for it.

Got into only 69 games last winter and scored points for a 4.2 points per game scoring average.

Many observers think he is one of the top leapers in the NBA right now. He's a former outstanding schoolboy star at Muncie (Indiana) Central High and then broke every record imaginable at little Highlands in Las Vegas, New Mexico. Came to the Royals as a free agent on a tip to Royals' general manager at the time, Pepper Wilson. Was cut after starring in the summer rookie camp and touring the west coast with the team under Jack McMahon. Played in the North American Basketball League that winter but was invited back to Cincinnati the following fall and this time made the varsity. Once in Cleveland two seasons ago, Dinwiddie stuffed in a basket twice in quick succession because he thought he missed the shot the first time. His top pro high is 20 points scored against the Hawks in St. Louis during his rookie season. Big Bill, who admits his weakness is purple suits, is still a carefree bachelor.

Fred Foster

MIAMI (O.) '68

15

Height: 6'5"
Weight: 215
Age: 23
Pos.: G-F

Called the finest prospect to come out of Miami since former Royal, Wayne Embry . . . Fred is also a native of Springfield, Ohio as Embry is . . . He was the ninth best scorer in the country two years ago with 617 points and a . . . points per game average for the Redskins . . . Foster, seeing only limited action as most NBA rookies last year, got into only 56 games, scoring 191 points for a 3.4 PPG mark . . . Could be a real dark-horse candidate for the regular starting guard job this campaign . . . Outstanding strength also enables Foster to move into a corner assignment as well which he did last year several times . . . Was tabbed third by the Royals in the 1968 college draft . . . He led all comers in the Royals' summer camp that year twice coming up with games of 21 points each . . . Has good, accurate jump shot from beyond the key and can go one-on-one with the best of them . . . College scoring high was 43 points scored against Ball State . . . Is still a bachelor.

Johnny Green

MICHIGAN STATE '59

20

Every team that has had Johnny Green playing for them, has had the same worry — that the spectacular leaper doesn't crack his skull on the rafters of the arena. He's been a valuable "spot" man wherever he's gone in his 10 years of travel through the NBA. When the pace is dragging, or when extra rebounding strength is needed or if the just needed an emotional lift, Green is called upon for "his thing." In most cases, Green responds with an explosion. In Philadelphia, Green still is best remembered for his play against New York in the 1968 playoffs. Subbing for the injured Billy Cunningham, he sparked the 76ers to a 4-2 series victory over the Knicks and sent Philly into the eastern division finals where they lost to Boston. Green is a rarity. He never played high school ball. He played service ball in the Marine Corps and entered Michigan State on his own. He eventually became a standout for the Spartans and was New York's first draft choice in 1959. "Jumpin' John" played six full seasons with the Knicks and was traded to Baltimore during the seventh. San Diego claimed him in the expansion draft in 1967-68 and the Rockets sold him to Philadelphia on January 12, 1968. He was cut loose from the 76ers this summer and a phone call to Bob Cousy got him a try-out with the Royals.

Craig M. Raymond

BRIGHAM YOUNG '67

21

Height: 6' 11"

Weight: 240

Age: 24

Pos.: C

Craig Raymond, 6-11 product of Brigham Young University, played only 177 minutes in 27 games for the Philadelphia 76ers in 1968-69 . . . He spent most of the campaign with Wilkes-Barre, of the Eastern League, and rejoined 76ers' roster during the off-season . . . He came to the Royals in early October in exchange for veteran cornerman Fred Hetzel and a second-round draft choice which the Royals will get before the 1971-72 season . . . His height makes him the tallest member of the team, height that is occasionally well used in blocking shots, a department in which the Royals are not particularly strong . . . He was the No. 1 draft choice of the 76ers in 1967 . . . He kept his amateur status despite his high draft rating, playing one year with Simmenthal of Milan, Italy . . . 76ers' coach Jack Ramsay then negotiated to have Craig come back to the United States and turn pro for the 1968-69 season . . . Raymond got considerable playing time in this past summer in the tough Charles Baker League in Philadelphia . . . He showed improvement in all phases of the game and comes into this season a more confident young man.

Height: 6'8"
Weight: 235
Age: 29
Pos.: F

Although he missed eight games last season because of illness and injury, Jerry Lucas enjoyed his finest shooting year as a pro. He gunned in 551 percent of his field goal attempts, his finest ever in six seasons as a Royal. He was the club's third-best scorer with 1,357 points for an 18.3 points a game mark. Luke again topped the Royals in the all-important rebounding department with 1,360 for an 18.4 per game norm which put him sixth among BA's leaders. Still holds the club's all-time rebounding high for one game - 40 - which he pulled off against the 76ers in Philadelphia his rookie season. Hasn't missed an All-Star game since breaking into the NBA wars and was named the game's Most Valuable Player in 1964 in St. Louis. Came away with a Honda motorbike for his reward. Is now eighth among the NBA's all-time great rebounders with a total of 8,831 grabs. Was the club's No. 1 draft choice (territorial) actually while he was still a schoolboy star at Middletown (Ohio) High School. Went on to become one of the all-time great college basketball stars of the era at Ohio State. Sat out the first year of pro ball but broke in with a bang in the 1963-64 season scoring 1400 points and chalking up 1,375 rebounds. Kept busy this summer running his Jerry Lucas "Beef 'n' Shake" restaurant franchises throughout the tri-state area.

Age: 30

Pos.: G

Dubbed the "greatest playmaker since Shakespeare", the Royals' "Big O" continues to be an amazing basketball player. Even though his scoring average dipped to 24.7 points per game last year, Oscar topped the NBA in assists with 772 for a 9.8 norm. In doing so, he also passed Bob Cousy's all-time assists' total of 6,949. Oscar now has 7,173 feeds. Oscar missed only three games last winter in comparison to the 17 he was sidelined the se before. He chalked up 3,461 playing minutes, shot from the floor, and 838 from the foul line, good enough, fifth-best in the league. Also had 502 rebounds. Robertson is now fourth among the NBA's all-time leading scorers with 20,261 points in nine seasons and is third in scoring among those still active. Called by many the greatest all-around performer the game has ever known, Oscar has never missed an All-Star game since coming into the play-for-pay was back in 1960. Just last January in Baltimore, Oscar was named the game's Most Valuable Player for the third time and has been runnerup for the honor twice. Has been a first string member of the All-NBA squad every year. Holds practically every record imaginable at the University of Cincinnati and was a star high school cager at Crispus Attucks in Indianapolis. Is the author of a basketball book on fundamentals. Once cut a rock record entitled "The Big O" and is dabbling in a real estate development corporation. Married to the former Yvonne Crittenden, a Cincinnati schoolteacher and is the father of three little girls.

Odie Smith is now an eight year veteran in the NBA, not bad for a little guy who was once told by several college coaches that he was too small for the game. Smitty won honorable mention All-Kentucky at Farmington High School but was shunted by the college scouts because of his small frame. He went to a junior college in Mississippi and averaged better than 24 points a game and it was then that Coach Rupp talked Odie into attending UK where he led the Wildcats' "Fiddlin' Five" to the national championship. Picked up his nickname "Odie" from the Grand Ole Opry radio show emanating out of Nashville. Smith also played on the title-winning U.S. Olympic and Pan-American squads along with present teammates, Jerry Lucas and Oscar Robertson. Odie got into 73 games last winter and scored 703 points, a considerable drop from past performances and it was the first season he did not average double figures since the 1963-64 campaign. Always a tough foul shooter, Odie connected on 80.7 percent this past season. Odie and pretty wife Paula are the doting parents of Adrian Tyler. Adrian works for the First National Bank of Cincinnati during the off season and was the Royals softball team's leading slugger.

Al Tucker

OKLAHOMA BAPTIST '67

23

Height: 6'8"
Weight: 195
Age: 26
Pos.: F

Rangy Al Tucker, dubbed "Super Twigg" by his mates, averaged in double figures as a Royal last winter, breaking into 28 games after coming to Cincinnati in a late January exchange for veteran John Tresvant who shuffled off to Seattle. "Tuck", in all last season, played 84 games, scored 880 points and averaged points every time out. He also pulled in 43. bounds. He made the league's all-rookie team two seasons back with the Supersonics when he tossed 'em in at a 13.1 per game clip. A native of Dayton, Ohio, Tucker was an All-everything at Oklahoma Baptist and still holds the record for scoring the most points in NAIA tournament history. He was Seattle's No. 1 draft choice in the spring of 1967 and crashed the Sonics' starting lineup almost right away. His all-time professional high came against Elgin Baylor and the Los Angeles Lakers while with Seattle. Wears contact lenses after playing high school and college ball in horn rims. He was also a center in college and had a tough time at first adapting to the habit of facing the basket as a forward. Down the stretch last season as a Royal starter, Tucker hit double figures in his last 17 ball games. Could be a starting forward this campaign if he tightens up his defensive play. Attended summer school in Oklahoma this past off-season. Was married this past August.

Mr. Hustle, Inc. enjoyed his finest professional season to date last winter. "Tommy Van", Dick Van Arsdale's older brother, was the Royals' second-best scorer behind only Oscar Robertson with 1,492 points in 77 games for a 19.1 points per game mark. In three previous seasons, including two with Detroit, Van Arsdale's high point total had been 966 during the 1966-67 season. Tom, along with twin brother Dick (Phoenix) were standout members of their high school and college day teams but the NBA draft-split them up for the first time in their lives. Dick was drafted on the second round by New York Tommy was the second round choice of the Pistons. Jokingly exclaims that "I was really better than Dick at Indiana. He only scored 1,240 points in three years while I scored 1,252!"

Came to the Royals near the tailend of the 1967-68 campaign when the Royals peddled Happy Hairston and Jim Fox to the Pistons for Tom and John Tresvant. Very likely may wind up as a forward this season although he was a starting guard for Cincy last year. Has great speed and is a very aggressive driver for the hoop. Was a member of the league's All-Rookie team in 1966 along with brother Dick. Lives with wife Jeannie year-round now in Cincinnati. Does a great job for the Royals in the off-season speaking to groups and at banquets around the area.

Big Walt Wesley has improved each year according to his statistics. . . . As a rookie in 1966-67 he got into only 64 games and averaged 4.9 points a game. . . . The following season, he played in 66 games and averaged 6.8. . . . Last season he played in all 82 games, scored 624 points, racked up a 7.6 scoring norm. . . . Royals' officials figure at only 24 years of age, Walt is bound to keep on improving and this year could be the one. . . . "Wonderful Walter", at 6-11, was the tallest player ever drafted by the club. . . . He was the Royals' No. 1 draft choice in 1966 after turning in some great seasons at Kansas. . . . Walt averaged better than 19 points a game for the Jayhawks and during his junior year, was the only unanimous All-Big Eight player on the squad.

Last season, Walt's shooting improved immensely. . . . He hits with amazing accuracy on a little jumper around the key and on occasions has turned into a real shot-blocking machine on defense. . . . Walt should wage another interesting battle with veteran Connie Dierking for the club's starting center job. . . . Walt lives year-round in Cincinnati and staged several clinics at local playgrounds this past summer. . . . Bit the dust in the matrimonial game this past August.

Herman Gilliam

PURDUE '69

30

The Royals' drafted speedy Herm Gilliam No. 1 in last spring's draft. A native of Winston-Salem, N.C., Herm served as honorary co-captain for the Big Ten's Boilermakers both his junior and senior years. He twice received Purdue's Most Valuable Player award and was recipient of the Ward Lambert Scholarship Trophy. The award is given by the Purdue Reamer Club to the junior or senior major letterman with the highest scholastic index.

In three seasons at Purdue, Gilliam scored 1,118 points for a 15.9 scoring norm. He finished his career there in fifth position among Purdue's all-time scoring leaders. This past campaign, he was the Boilermakers' second-leading scorer, trailing only the sensational Rick Mount with 378 points in 24 games for a 15.7 points per game mark. He hit on .467 percent of his shots from the floor and clicked on .857 percent of his charity tosses. Herm was also Purdue's leading rebounder with 204 grabs for an 8.5 per game average. High single game in college was 29 points scored against Ohio State. A bachelor.

"Tremendous potential" is the tag pinned up on Luther Rackley's slender frame. . . . The Royals drafted Rackley second in last spring's college draft go-round and have high hopes for the Troy, N.Y., native. . . . "Luke", as he was called at Xavier, set a new school mark in field goal percentage during the 1968-69 season when he gunned in 554 percent of his shots from the hardwood. . . . Luther scored 455 points for an average of 17.5 points a game for the Musketeers this past winter and was named the school's Most Valuable Player in post-season honors. . . . He also was named to the All-Tourney squad in the Mobile Classic. Rackley officially had another season of eligibility remaining at Xavier but jumped at the chance to play in the NBA with Cincinnati. . . . Olympic star, Spencer Haywood, named Luther as the "toughest center" he faced last season and that's saying a lot since the Detroit ace faced some good ones including giant Bob Lanier of St. Bonaventure. Luther is a bachelor.

ROYALTY DOWN THRU THE YEARS!

THE OLD ROCHESTER Royals were the team to beat early days of the National Basketball League, later the Basketball Association of America and still later, the National Basketball Association of today.

Maurice Stokes

The Rochester cagers won two world championships in their first six seasons of existence along with finishing first in the eastern division twice, once in the western division and on top once in the Central division.

They were one of the class teams of the late 1940's and early 1950's until the Minneapolis Lakers with George Mikan came into prominence.

From 1945 through 1954, the Harrison Brothers, Les and Jack had never experienced a losing season in Rochester, N.Y. After finishing second in the western division and getting edged in the finals of the 1953-54 playoffs by the Lakers, things changed for the worse.

The Harrisons figured the end of the dynasty was near as the franchise was sold to Cincinnati, lock, stock and barrel. There was local interest with the former University of Cincinnati star, Jack Twyman and former Xavier University stalwart, Dave Piontek, wearing the blue and red striped Royals' shorts at this time. Both had had impressive rookie seasons and there was also a fellow by the name of Maurice Stokes whom many thought would be the greatest all-around performer in the pro game.

THE ROYALS' first season in Cincinnati was so-so. The team finished with a 33-39 won-lost mark, tying for second place in the west but losing out to Detroit, 2-0 in the post-season playoffs.

The final loss at Detroit to the Pistons proved to be one of the costliest setbacks the Royals were to encounter for it was immediately after this game that Stokes became violently ill and ended on the homeward-bound plane. The former St. Francis star never recovered and is still hospitalized in Cincinnati, bedded down with a mysterious brain ailment.

Jack McMahon

From there, the Royals staggered through two very lean seasons, winning a total of only 38 games in 1958-59 and 1959-60. They did survive however and made it into the "Year of the O" — the year that everyone had been waiting for when the great Oscar Robertson graduated from the University of Cincinnati and made his debut with the hometown Royals.

Robertson showed right away that he wasn't just a starry-eyed publicist's daydream. He was for real! The Royals bounced back to win 33 games and lose 46 that season and things picked up considerably at the Gardens' turnstiles when 194,017 fans watched their favorites take on the best in basketball that winter.

The following 1961-62 campaign under coach Charley Wolf, the Royals had their first winning year in town. They racked up a 43-37 mark good enough to finish second in the western division but again, Detroit edged them in the playoffs, 3-1.

FIERY JACK McMahon took over the coaching reins for the departed Wolf in 1963-64 and the Royals raced to their finest won-lost record of all time, capturing 55 wins, losing only 25 and finishing second to Boston in the east.

There had been another addition to the team, too. Ohio State's great Jerry Lucas, who had been a schoolboy living legend up the road in Middletown, Ohio, joined the Royals to give the team one of the greatest one-two punches in the game.

The Royals, with such capable performers as Wayne Embry, Tom Hawkins, Happy Hairston and Arlen Bockhorn supporting the Robertson-Lucas tandem, enjoyed two more winning seasons under McMahon but could never get past the first round of the division playoffs against either Boston or Philadelphia.

During the 1967-68 season under local favorite coach Ed Jucker, the Royals lost one more game than the year before but finished fifth in the ever-improving eastern division and for the first time since 1962, failed to qualify for a playoff berth.

Last winter, the Royals wound up all even at 41-41, finishing sixth in the east thus missing the playoffs for the second straight season.

ROYALS HALL-OF-FAME

I MARCH 13, 1969, Cincinnati Royals fans got a chance to vote for their favorite performers, both for the home club and the visitors.

The voting ran true to form as Jack Twyman and Bob Cousy were the first players ever to enter into the Royals' Hall-of-Fame.

Twyman, one of the most popular players to ever wear a Royals' uniform here won in a landslide over other nominees, Arlen Bockhorn, Dave Piontek, Maurice Stokes and Clyde Lovellette.

Cousy, who just a while later, was named as the Royals' coach, proved his popularity here in Cincinnati when he bettered such great opposing stars as Bob Pettit, Bill Sharman, Dolph Schayes and Frank Ramsey.

A sports committee made up of Pat Harmon and Barry Cobb of the Post & Times-Star; Jim Schottelkotte of the Enquirer; Paul Sommerkamp, popular sports announcer and Royals' publicity director Andy Cox, picked the original candidates for the NBA's first Hall.

Candidates for the Hall of Fame must have played with the Royals or in the NBA for at least one season; may no longer be active and may be living or deceased.

Again, sometime this season, a Royal and a popular visiting player will be voted into the Royals' Hall of Fame by the fans.
